Introduction:

Importance of communication has always been realized all times in organisation as it is the most vital means of making people connect with one another. It is widely accepted fact that communication plays significant role in starting, developing and maintaining relations, however, organisations seem least bothered on how to develop good communication skills of the employees. Today, not only in corporate but in almost all aspects of social life, communication plays a crucial role. Thinking of effectiveness of any piece of work whether in business, government or social sector it is almost impossible to be successful without having good communication skills. People have to communicate with one other, exchange ideas, emotions, information, take decisions and talk about innovations. Developing communication skills, be it verbal or non-verbal is very-very important at a stage of student life itself.

Understanding Body Language is also equally or you can say sometimes more important than good verbal communication. It provides you with an extra advantage in your daily life if you understand what a person want to communicate with its Body Language. Body Language Basics will provide you with a great set of skills to understand that 'what is not said' is just as important as 'what is said'. It will also give you an ability to see and understand how your own Body Language is being seen. You will be able to adjust and improve the way you communicate through non-verbal communications.

Coordinator

Muzaffarnagar

Course Objective -

The main objective of the course is to assist the students developing their communication competence by providing information regarding different forms of communication and their appropriate use along with good understanding of body language.

Duration of Course - 60 Hours

Course Fee - Free of Cost

Eligibility - All the students pursuing any undergraduate course or above are eligible to participate in the present course.

Learning Outcomes -

By the end of this program, participants will be able, to communicate more effectively and efficiently by:

- i. Listening, and responding with an open mind in a more effective way.
- ii. Using appropriate communication methods.
- iii. Minimizing communication barriers.
- iv. Using verbal and non-verbal messages appropriately.
- v. Relating and networking with others.
- vi. Giving and receiving instruction correctly
- vii. Use of two-way communication feedback.
- viii. Recognize and appreciate cultural and gender difference in communication.

A Certificate Course Entrepreneurship Development (for Aspiring Entrepreneurs)

CERTIFICATE COURSE IN ENTREPRENEURSHIP DEVELOPMENT

Duration: 32 Hours

Fee: There is no fee of the course

Eligibility: Preferably of final year UG students in Commerce, Science, Agriculture

Medium of Instruction: English and Hindi

INTRODUCTION

The traditional entrepreneurship education seeks to prepare the entrepreneur by providing information and tools without understanding the immediate needs of the entrepreneur. At SRC, we believe that entrepreneurs don't need a lot of information; they need targeted knowledge, experiential wisdom, peer-based learning environment, and program deliverables that advance the state of their start-up. SRC with its mission of creating entrepreneurs that will stand through changing time has come up with a Certificate Course in Entrepreneurship Development.

VEDIC MATHEMATICS

Organized by:

DEPARTMENT OF BASIC SCIENCE,
SHRI RAM COLLEGE,
MUZAFFARNAGAR

11th January – 06th February, 2021

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Vedic Mathematics is a blessing to everybody in this day and age when people's numerical skills are deteriorating as the use of calculators is increasing commencing at younger age. Vedic Mathematics' shorter, quicker and easy to remember techniques enables any student to do calculations faster than they would with conventional methods. Students of Vedic Mathematics dispel their fear of mathematics and gain a new-found confidence to work on any mathematical problem without apprehension. This Vedic Mathematics course aims to promote the traditional knowledge of Mathematics mastered by the mathematicians of ancient India.

COURSE CONTENTS

- High Speed Mathematical Operations
- Algebra & Calculus
- Square, Cube & Multiple Roots
- Maths Meditation
- Pythagoras Theorem
- Decimals & Recurring Decimals
- Coordinate Geometry
- Determinants
- Calendars & Time

Report on
Three Week Certificate Course
On
VEDIC MATHEMATICS
Dated: January 11- February 06, 2021

Organized By:
Department OF Basic Science
Shri Ram College, Muzaffarnagar

Eminent Speakers:
Dr. Vinit Kumar Sharma
Dr. Manoj Kumar Mittal
Dr. Ashwani Kumar
Ms. Anjali Goyal

About Course:

The three week long certificate course presents the ancient techniques in the field of Mathematics. It discusses shorter, quicker and easy to remember techniques enables any student to do calculations faster than they would with conventional methods.

Objectives Of The Programme:

This Vedic Mathematics course aims to promote the traditional knowledge of Mathematics mastered by the mathematicians of ancient India.

Time Duration: 02:00 pm to 03:30 pm Daily

Inaugural Session:

Department of Basic Science College had organized a certificate course on "Vedic Mathematics" in the months of January 2021. 4 teachers and 55 students from various streams completed the programme successfully. The course was chaired by chief guest & speakers, Dr. Aditya Gautam (Principal Shri Ram College), Dr. Vinit Kumar Sharma, Dr. Ashwani Kumar, Dr. Manoj Kumar Mittal, Dr. Pooja Tomar & the entire faculty and student participants were also present during the inauguration of course.

As per the Indian tradition, the course was inaugurated with prayer and lighting of the lamp. Dr. Manoj Kumar Mittal, Asso. Professor, Dept. Of Basic Science welcomed all. He had given introduction of all dignitaries on the dais and invited guests.

The teaching methodology behind the Vedic Mathematics was created by Dr. Vinit Kumar Sharma, Dr. Manoj Kumar Mittal, Dr. Ashwani Kumar & Ms. Anjali Goyal.

Vedic Mathematics is a blessing to everybody in this day and age when people's numerical skills are deteriorating as the use of calculators is increasing commencing at younger age. Vedic Mathematics' shorter, quicker and easy to remember techniques enables any student to do calculations faster than they would with conventional methods. Students of Vedic Mathematics dispel their fear of mathematics and gain a new-found confidence to work on any mathematical problem without apprehension. Dr. Vinit Kumar Sharma himself guided the students during his brief lecture. Overall, the course was an eye opener for the students and an extremely enjoyable experience.

The feedback from the students was excellent. According to the students, "The simulation definitely maximizes student learning. The decisions that the student faces are very realistic. I really like the idea of phasing new material in gradually so it can be assimilated over a period of time, thus avoiding information overload." Dr. Ashwani Kumar gave the inaugural address explaining the need for the learning and what skills a learner must possess. He gave best wishes to the Department for successful completion of the course.

Valedictory Session:

On the last day of course, an official valedictory session was held. Dr. Aditya Gautam, Principal of the college, chaired the event. Dr. Manoj Kumar Mittal presented the outcomes of course and demonstrated the learning they performed. Dr. Aditya Gautam emphasized the contributions of ancient mathematicians and future opportunities during his speech.

Dr. Vinit Kumar Sharma also addressed the group and acknowledged the positive steps taken by speakers as a result of course. Addressing participants Dr. Pooja Tomar presented a vote of thanks to all guest and speakers. Finally the committee awarded the certificates to the participants for successfully completing the course.

Notice

Date- 01-01-2021

This is to inform to all the students that a Certificate Course is offered by the department for limited number of students free of cost. The details of this Certificate Course are as follows:-

- 1- Name of the Course – ORGANIC FARMING
- 2- Duration-08-02-21 to 27-02-21

*Interested students can registered their name till 15-02-2021 and submit duly filled application form to Dr. Ashwani Kumar

A Certificate will be given after successful completion of the course.

Certification Course in Organic Farming

Syllabus

SECTION-A

- Introduction; Need of Organic Farming; Benefits of Organic Farming; Social aspects of Organic Farming; Market aspects of Organic Farming
- Introduction; Need of Organic Fertilizer; Benefits of Organic Fertilizer; Preparation of Organic Fertilizer; Demonstration & land preparation
- Plant Nutrients: Name of plant Nutrients; Functions of Nutrients in plant growth and Development
- Organic Manure – FYM/Rural compost, City compost, Oil cakes, Animal wastes, Vermi composts, etc; Characterization and Nutrients content of the above sources
- Green Manure – Green Manure with Leguminous crops in crop rotation. In-situ incorporation of crop residues. Benefits: Liquid Manure

SECTION B

- Organic crop production practices
- Organic crop production methods- wheat, rice, sugarcane, maize,
- Organic crop production methods- vegetables- okra, cowpea, solanaceous cucurbits
- Organic crop production methods- Fruits: mango, banana
- Organic crop production methods- tuber crops Organic crop production methods- spices- pepper, ginger, turmeric, cardamom,
- Livestock component in organic farming

SECTION-C

- Green labels, Bio-fuel crops. Integrated Nutrient Management (INM) and Integrated Plant Nutrient Supply System (IPNS). NPOP, organic produce quality considerations, certification, accreditation process, marketing and Economics.
- Farm economy: Basic concept of economics- Demand, supply, Economic Viability of a farm, basic production principles. Reducing expenses, ways to increase returns. Cost of production system. Benefit/ cost ratio.
- Entrepreneurship Development Entrepreneurship – Concept, characteristics, approaches, need for entrepreneurship Traits of an entrepreneur – Risk taking, leadership, decision making, planning, organizing, coordinating and marketing; Types of entrepreneurs
- Market Management – Concept planning for marketing target marketing and competitive strategy

Bioinformatics for Beginners

Bioinformatics is the science of storing, extracting, organizing, analyzing, interpreting and utilizing biological information. This course intends to provide hands-on training to help work competently in a bioinformatics environment. The knowledge acquired also provides additional qualifications for a prospective candidate towards employment.

Chairman
IQAC, Shri Ram College,
Muzaffarnagar

Highlights of Content –

- Introduction to Bioinformatics
- Internet and Network access
- Familiarization with biological database
- Sequence alignment for nucleotide and protein
- Drug Designing, docking and molecular dynamics

Scope and Benefits

Bioinformatics is extensively used in biomedical research and developmental activities. It integrates mathematics, computer science, molecular biology, information technology, and genetic engineering. In this era of the genomic revolution, the data is being gathered faster than it can be analyzed and utilized. There is a tremendous demand for professionals who can use technology to utilize the ever-growing collection of biological information.

An expert in this discipline can expect highly remunerative career options. The boom in molecular biology research had led to an increase in Job prospects after studying Bioinformatics.

There are various opportunities after this course:

You can land a job as a Bioinformatics Software Developer, Research Scientist / Associate, Network Administrator / Analyst, Computational Biologist, Database Programmer, Pharmacogenomics and more. Companies like Wipro, Reliance, IBM Life Sciences, Ranbaxy, Torrent Pharmaceuticals, Strand Life Sciences are always on a lookout for young, skilled professionals.

Duration – 45 days

Eligibility - The course will be open for Intermediate pass candidates.

Maximum Intake - 60 No. of participants

Minimum intake – 30 No. of participants

Certification Course in Bioinformatics Syllabus

UNIT-A

1. Introduction to Bioinformatics – History, scope and applications
2. Cell structure, Ultra structure of Prokaryotes and Eukaryotes, Cellular organelles.
3. Biomolecules - Carbohydrates, Protein, Lipids and Nucleic acids. Protein conformation.
4. Networking - Network access, Internet and E- mail services.

UNIT_B

5. Familiarization with biological databases - Nucleotide sequence databases, Protein sequence databases, Protein structure databases and specialized databases.
6. Sequence alignment for nucleotides and proteins. Local and Global alignment. Needleman - Wunch Algorithm and Smith-Waterman Algorithm.
7. Multiple sequence alignment
8. Comparative modeling – homology modeling .Use of SWISS –PDB VIEWER.

UNIT-C

9. Introduction to Computer Aided Drug Designing (CADD).
10. Introduction to Molecular mechanics and Molecular Dynamics.
11. Introduction to Docking

ON

PERSONALITY DEVELOPMENT

"Success is a Journey and it is not the destination. Disappointments, Rejections, Unsuccessful attempts and Criticisms are not failures to the Successful people. Failures are the Part of success. Winners use failures as stepping stones to success. This is the only difference between people who win and people who don't! "

VALUE ADDED COURSE

INSURANCE AWARENESS

(Session 2020-21)

“An individual is exposed to various risks in daily life and it will surprise one to note how many of these can actually be insured. Life insurance and general insurance companies offer a variety of products covering different types of risks. Not only is there a dearth of knowledge about these but also most individuals are not aware of the value that insurance, as an option, could add to their lives. While affordability and the place of insurance in the list of an individual’s priority in this context are important questions, quite a few are uninsured purely due to lack of awareness about insurance as a protection tool and details about the types of insurances that are possible”

About SRGC

Under the visionary leadership of eminent educationist Dr. S. C. Kulshreshtha, about one and half decades back, acclaimed academicians, leading industrialists and prominent bureaucrats came together to form Shri Ram Charitable Trust. The vision behind was to promote and fulfill the need of technical and professional higher education, skill development and entrepreneurship inculcation among young students of India and neighboring underdeveloped countries.

In a very short span of time, the family of Shri Ram Group of Colleges has grown tremendously. At present more than 13000 students are studying in the group. Today Dr. S. C. Kulshreshtha has spread his educational empire in three districts of Uttar Pradesh.

Certificate Course on Effective Writing

About the Course

Writing, one of the four language skills continues to have its importance in all times. A good number of people despite having good spoken skills at times fail to prove their mettle when it comes to writing. Since writing represents a writer even in his absence and doesn't have scope for clarification, one has to master this art well. The present course on writing aims at familiarizing learners with the nuances of effective writing which can help them know the subtle art of writing, enabling them to write with clarity, precision and at the same time with the subtlety to express their ideas on different occasions with the notions of appropriateness and accuracy.

The Certificate Course on Effective Writing is free to all students. The Time Duration of the Course is 15 days & 30 Hours.

Certificate Course on Effective Writing

About the Course

Writing, one of the four language skills continues to have its importance in all times. A good number of people despite having good spoken skills at times fail to prove their mettle when it comes to writing. Since writing represents a writer even in his absence and doesn't have scope for clarification, one has to master this art well. The present course on writing aims at familiarizing learners with the nuances of effective writing which can help them know the subtle art of writing, enabling them to write with clarity, precision and at the same time with the subtlety to express their ideas on different occasions with the notions of appropriateness and accuracy.

The Certificate Course on Effective Writing is free to all students. The Time Duration of the Course is 15 days & 30 Hours.

Report Summary

On

Web Designing (SRC-CA301)

(2020-21)

Department of Computer Application (BCA) conducted a certificate course on “Web Designing” for the students to impart knowledge of fundamental Web Designing and software’s needed to develop a website.

The program was inaugurated by the Director, SRC Muzaffarnagar on 5/10/2020. In his inaugural speech he encouraged students to participate in training and skill development programs.

The aim of the program was to impart knowledge to design websites using the web languages such as HTML/CSS3/Bootstrap/JavaScript along with jQuery. The course in Web Design aims to enable the students to create standard-based websites that are accessible and usable by a full spectrum of users.

The course comprised of theory and practical sessions amounting to 40 hours.

At the end of the course, the students were assessed for their performance based on the system based practical assignments and minor projects as per the following schedule:

- The system based practical assignments was conducted on 31/Oct/ 2020.
- Viva-Voce was held on 02/Nov/2020.

120 students appeared for the assessment out of which 118 students passed and 11 students secured A-Grade. At the end of the course certificates were issued to the students.

Report

A one-month certificate course on Introductory Program on Agriculture Studies was conducted by the Department of Agriculture, Shri Ram College, in which 50 students participated and completed the course. In this course, steps were taken for the students to develop their skills and improve their knowledge. Nowadays, there is a great need of education for doing modern farming because the equipment used from plowing the field to harvesting the crop, seeds etc. should be of quality so that there is no difficulty in farming and production is increased. With this it is old time our farming students going here were told like Agriculture is the art and science of cultivating the soil, growing crops, and raising livestock. It includes the preparation of plant and animal products for people to use and their distribution to markets.

Agriculture provides most of the world's food and fabrics. Cotton, wool, and leather are all agricultural products. Agriculture also provides wood for construction and paper products.

These products, as well as the agricultural methods used, may vary from one part of the world to another.

Start of Agriculture

Over centuries, the growth of agriculture supported the development of cities. Before agriculture became widespread, hunting and gathering was how people fed themselves. Between 10,000 and 12,000 years ago, people gradually learned how to grow cereal and root crops, and settled down to a life based on farming.

Eventually, much of Earth's population became dependent on agriculture. Scholars are not sure why this shift to farming took place, but it may have occurred because of climate change.

When people began growing crops, they also continued to adapt animals and plants for human use. Adapting wild plants and animals for people to use is called domestication. Hunter-gatherers began to domesticate animals and change the natural environment to grow more food even before settled farming became widespread.

Barley, wheat, legumes, vetch, and flax were among the first plants to be domesticated.

The first domesticated animals were dogs, which were used for hunting. Sheep and goats were probably domesticated next. People also domesticated cattle and pigs. The predecessors of most of these animals had once been hunted for hides and meat. Many of them also became sources of milk, cheese, and butter. Eventually, people used domesticated animals such as oxen for plowing, pulling, and transportation.

Agriculture enabled people to produce surplus food. They could use this extra food when crops failed or trade it for other goods.

Agriculture kept formerly nomadic people near their fields and led to the development of permanent villages. These became linked through trade. New economies were so successful in some areas that cities developed. The earliest societies based on intensive agriculture arose in the Fertile Crescent (which spans the Levant, modern-day Turkey, and Iran) and along the Nile River in Egypt. Other very early agricultural societies developed independently in Central America, East Asia, the Indus Valley, and West Africa.

Improved Technology

Many effective agricultural techniques have roots in pre-agricultural human history. For millennia, people have used controlled burning techniques to get rid of brush and debris, allowing edible plants to grow more abundantly and preventing larger wildfires during dry seasons. Today, large wildfires in North America and Australia demonstrate the importance of maintaining controlled burning practices perfected by many Native American tribes and Aboriginal Australian peoples.

Farming has also improved over the years. Early farmers cultivated small plots of land by hand, using axes to clear away trees and digging sticks to break up and till the soil. Over time, improved farming tools of bone, stone, bronze, and iron were developed. New methods of storage evolved. People began stockpiling foods in jars and clay-lined pits for use in times of scarcity. They also began making clay pots and other vessels for carrying and cooking food.

Around 5500 B.C.E., farmers in Mesopotamia developed simple irrigation systems. By channeling water from streams onto their fields, farmers were able to settle in areas once thought to be unsuited to agriculture. In Mesopotamia, Egypt, and China, people organized themselves and worked together to build and maintain better irrigation systems.

Early farmers also developed improved varieties of plants. For example, around 6000 B.C.E., a new variety of wheat arose in South Asia and Egypt. It was stronger than previous cereal grains, its hulls were easier to remove, and it could be made into bread.

As the Romans expanded their empire using warfare and coercion, they wrote manuals about the farming techniques they observed in Africa and Asia, and adapted them to land in Europe.

In China, farmers also adapted tools and methods from nearby empires. A variety of rice from Vietnam ripened quickly and allowed farmers to harvest several crops during a single growing season. This rice quickly became popular throughout China.

Many medieval European farmers used an open-field system of planting. One field would be planted in spring, another in autumn, and one would be left unplanted, or fallow. This system preserved nutrients in the soil, increasing crop production.

The leaders of the Islamic Golden Age (which reached its height around 1000 C.E.) in North Africa and the Middle East made agriculture into a science. Islamic Golden Age farmers learned crop rotation.

In the 15th and 16th centuries, explorers introduced new varieties of plants and agricultural products into Europe. From Asia, they carried home coffee, tea, and indigo, a plant used to make blue dye. From the Americas, they took plants such as potatoes, tomatoes, corn (maize), beans, peanuts, and tobacco. Some of these became staples and expanded people's diets.

Machinery

A period of important agricultural development began in the early 1700s for Great Britain and the Low Countries (Belgium, Luxembourg, and the Netherlands, which lie below sea level). New agricultural inventions dramatically increased food production in Europe and European colonies, particularly in North America.

One of the most important of these developments was an improved horse-drawn seed drill invented by Jethro Tull in England. Until that time, farmers sowed seeds by hand. Tull's drill made rows of holes for the seeds. By the end of the 18th century, seed drilling was widely practiced in Europe.

Many machines were developed in the United States. The cotton gin, invented by Eli Whitney in 1794, reduced the time needed to separate cotton fiber from seed. The invention of the cotton gin was not without negative consequences, however: as cotton became more profitable and less labor-intensive, enslavers had incentive to buy more enslaved people to produce more cotton.

In the 1830s, Cyrus McCormick's mechanical reaper helped modernize the grain-cutting process. At about the same time, John and Hiram Pitts introduced a horse-powered thresher that shortened the process of separating grain and seed from chaff and straw. John Deere's steel plow, introduced in 1837, made it possible to work the tough prairie soil with much less horsepower. Along with new machines, there were several important advances in farming methods. By selectively breeding animals (breeding those with desirable traits), farmers increased the size and productivity of their livestock.

Cultures have been breeding animals for centuries. Ancestors of modern sheep, goats, cattle, and pigs were the first livestock to be bred selectively. Farmers began to practice selective breeding on a large scale beginning in 18th century Europe. An early example of this is the Leicester sheep, an animal selectively bred in England for its quality meat and long, coarse wool.

Plants could also be selectively bred for certain qualities. In 1866, Gregor Mendel's studies in heredity were published in Austria. In experiments with pea plants, Mendel learned how traits were passed from one generation to the next. His work paved the way for improving crops through genetics.

New crop rotation methods also evolved during this time. Many of these were adopted over the next century or so throughout Europe. For example, the Norfolk four-field system, developed in England, proved quite successful. It involved the yearly rotation of several crops, including wheat, turnips, barley, clover, and ryegrass, and livestock management practices, in which animals grazed in selected fields and left animal waste behind. This added nutrients to the soil, enabling farmers to grow enough to sell some of their harvest without having to leave any land unplanted.

Agricultural Science

Between 1960 and 2000, staple crop yields in low- and middle-income countries like Mexico and India increased substantially. How did this great leap in productivity come about? It happened largely because of scientific advances and the development of new sources of power.

By the late 1950s, most farmers in high-income countries were using both gasoline and electricity to power machinery. Tractors had replaced draft animals and steam-powered machinery. Farmers were using machines in almost every stage of cultivation and livestock management.

Electricity first became a power source on farms in Japan and Germany in the early 1900s. By 1960, most farms in the U.S. and other high-income countries were electrified. Electricity lit farm buildings and powered such machinery as water pumps, milking machines, and feeding equipment. Today, electricity controls entire environments in livestock barns and poultry houses.

Traditionally, farmers have used a variety of methods to protect their crops from pests and diseases. They have put herb-based poisons on crops, handpicked insects off plants, bred strong varieties of crops, and rotated crops to control insects. Now, almost all farmers, especially in high-income countries, rely on chemicals to control pests. The definition of “pest” ranges from insects to animals such as rabbits and mice, as well as weeds and disease-causing organisms—bacteria, viruses, and fungi. With the use of chemicals, crop losses and prices have declined dramatically.

For thousands of years, farmers relied on natural fertilizer—materials such as manure, wood ash, ground bones, fish or fish parts, and bird and bat waste called guano—to replenish or increase nutrients in the soil. Some farmers, particularly those that grow organic crops, still use natural fertilizers.

In the early 1800s, scientists discovered which elements were most essential to plant growth: nitrogen, phosphorus, and potassium. Now, many farmers use chemical fertilizers with nitrates and phosphates because they greatly increase crop yields.

However, pesticides and fertilizers have come with another set of problems. The heavy reliance on chemicals has disturbed the environment, often contaminating the surrounding soil and water while being toxic to birds, fish, and other species that farmers do not intend to target. Chemical use may also pose a health hazard to people, especially through contaminated water supplies. Agricultural scientists are looking for safer chemicals to use as fertilizers and pesticides. Some farmers use natural controls and rely less on chemicals.

Farming in Water

Agriculture includes such forms of cultivation as hydroponics and aquaculture. Both involve farming in water.

Hydroponics is the science of growing plants in nutrient solutions. Just one acre of nutrient solution can yield more than 50 times the amount of lettuce grown on the same amount of soil.

Aquaculture—primarily the cultivation of fish and shellfish—was practiced in China, India, and Egypt thousands of years ago. It is now used in lakes, ponds, the ocean, and other bodies of water throughout the world. Some forms of aquaculture, such as shrimp farming, have become important industries in many Asian and Latin American countries.

Climate change and improved technology are altering the way freshwater and ocean fisheries operate. Global warming has pushed warm-water species toward the poles and reduced the habitats of cold-water species. Traditional fishing communities in both developed and developing countries find the number of fish dwindling.

Bottom trawling has affected ocean ecosystems. In bottom trawling, enormous nets are strung from fishing boats and dragged at the bottom of the ocean. The nets catch halibut and squid, but also stir up sediment at the bottom of the ocean. This disturbs the marine life (plankton and algae) that forms the basis of the food chain.

Genetic Modification

For centuries, people have bred new types of plants and animals through experimentation. During the 1950s and 1960s, scientists developed new strains of high-yield wheat and rice. They introduced them into Mexico and parts of Asia. As a result, production of grain soared in these areas. This bold experiment in agriculture has been called the "Green Revolution."

With the successes of the Green Revolution came problems. To produce high yields, the new strains required chemical fertilizers, pesticides, and irrigation. In many low- and middle-income countries, independent farmers cannot afford the new technology and big business has taken over agriculture. The new, high-production crops also put stress on native plants and animals.

Later, scientists and farmers understood how the new strains developed. This gave rise to a new green revolution: genetic modification of food.

Inside every cell are genes, material that determines many of the characteristics of an organism. Genetics is the study of what characteristics organisms inherit and how these traits are transmitted. With a greater knowledge of genetics, people can scientifically select characteristics they want to reproduce. New technology has revolutionized the selective breeding process in both plants and animals.

Beginning in the 1970s, scientists found that they could rearrange genes and add new ones to promote disease resistance, productivity, and other desired characteristics in crops and livestock. These genetically modified organisms (GMOs or GM foods) are now common throughout the developed world. Biotechnology allows scientists to alter the DNA of microbes, plants, and animals. GMOs that have genetic material, or DNA, from other species are called transgenic organisms.

IQAC, Shri Ram College,

A gene from an Arctic plant, for example, could be added (spliced) into the DNA of a strawberry plant to increase the strawberry's resistance to cold and thus extend its growing season. The strawberry would be a transgenic plant.

Biotechnology has brought advances in animal husbandry (ranching, or the raising of domestic animals). Today's farm animals are larger and grow faster than their predecessors.

Cattle, for example, are grazing animals. Their digestive system has evolved to process grasses and other crops. Corn and other grains cause a cow's digestive system to become acidic. That makes it easier for dangerous bacteria (such as E.coli) to develop. Bacterial infections can be harmful to the cow, and can also infect their milk and meat consumed by people. Antibiotics are spliced into the DNA of feed corn to prevent such infection. Antibiotics have been used since the 1950s to stimulate cattle growth. Over time, this practice has led to the development of antibiotic-resistant bacteria in cattle and people. Many cattle are also given anabolic steroids, or growth hormones, to make them get bigger, faster.

Farmers who grow GM foods increase production with less labor and less land. Many consumers favor GM foods. Vegetables and fruits last longer and are less likely to bruise. Meats are fatter—more tender and salty.

Most of the world's farmers live in low- and middle-income countries in Africa, Asia, and Latin America. Some of them cultivate land as their ancestors did hundreds or even thousands of years ago. They may not use agricultural technology involving expensive chemicals or production methods.

Many of the world's farmers are subsistence farmers. They use the bulk of the food they produce for themselves and their families, unlike commercial farmers, who only grow crops to sell.

Methods of Cultivation

Agricultural methods often vary widely around the world, depending on climate, terrain, traditions, and available technology.

Low-technology farming involves permanent crops: food grown on land that is not replanted after each harvest. Citrus trees and coffee plants are examples of permanent crops. Higher-technology farming involves crop rotation, which requires knowledge of farmable land. Scholars and engineers not only use crop rotation and irrigation, but plant crops according to the season, type of soil, and amount of water needed.

In coastal West Africa, farmers, usually women, plant corn soon after the first rains of the growing season. They often use an ancient method of clearing called slash-and-burn. First, the farmer cuts all the brush in her plot. When this vegetation dries, she sets fire to it. The heat from the fire makes the soil easy to turn, and the burned vegetation fertilizes it. The farmer then sows kernels of corn saved from the previous year's harvest.

Between rows of corn, the coastal West African farmer plants other staple crops: legumes, such as peas, or root vegetables, such as yams. This practice of growing several crops in the same plot is called intercropping. By covering most of the ground with vegetation, intercropping prevents moisture loss and soil erosion from seasonal rains.

Rain supplies water for the growing plants. The farmer weeds her plot with a hoe. At harvest time, she and her family pick the corn, husk it, and spread the ears in the sun to dry. They grind the dried corn to make porridge.

Traditionally, the coastal West African farmer uses the same plot for several years, until its fertility declines. Then she moves to another plot, leaving the first to lie fallow for up to 10 years. Now, an increasing population has caused fallow periods to be reduced and has made permanent cultivation more common.

Agricultural methods used in the Corn Belt of the U.S. are very different. The Corn Belt is the area of the northern Midwest where most of the nation's corn crop is grown. First of all, farmers rarely work alone—the size of U.S. farms requires a lot of labor. Soon after they harvest the corn in autumn, farmers work leftover vegetation, or stubble, into the soil. In the spring, farmers work the soil again, using an implement with rows of sharp-edged steel discs, called a disc harrow. The discs cut into the soil, breaking it into smaller pieces and supplying it with air.

Next, a tractor-pulled planter sows rows of seed. The machine makes furrows in the soil, drops in kernels of high-yield, genetically modified corn, and covers them with dirt. After the corn seeds have sprouted, another machine injects liquid fertilizer into the ground.

The farmers then use chemicals to control weeds and pests, and loosen the soil with a tractor-pulled cultivator during the harvesting season.

U.S. industrial farmers may plant a thousand acres of just corn. The practice of specializing in a single crop is known as monoculture. To harvest the crop, farmers use a mechanical harvester that picks the ears of corn and shells them into a bin.

Little of the corn grown in the Corn Belt is for human consumption. Most of the corn grown in the U.S. is for cattle feed and industrial uses, such as corn syrup sweeteners.

Livestock

From alpacas in Peru to zebus in India, billions of domesticated animals around the world are raised and cared for in a variety of ways. In many countries, domesticated animals are an important source of food.

In Nigeria, for example, the Fulani people have long been pastoralists and nomads. They move with their cattle herds from one grazing area to another. The cattle feed on scrub and grasses in land unsuitable for farming. The Fulani rely on cattle for milk, but rarely slaughter their animals for meat.

Throughout the U.S., beef cattle are bred to grow quickly and yield large quantities of fatty meat. When they are five to 12 months old, the animals are shipped to feedlots. There, they are kept in pens and fed grain and vitamin supplements until they reach market size. Then they are slaughtered.

The two ways of raising livestock are confronting each other in low- and middle-income countries. In Uganda, Ankole cattle have been bred to withstand the variable climate—their long, curved horns help distribute heat and their digestive systems have adapted to poor nutrition and little water during dry seasons. However, the market for milk has driven many Ugandan farmers to import Holstein cattle. Holsteins are native to Northern Europe. Keeping them healthy in an equatorial region requires a high amount of antibiotics, vaccines, and other chemicals. The Ankole, which produce little milk and leaner meat, may be extinct within the century.

Many farmers throughout the world practice free-range poultry farming. The birds forage for food in farms or community yards, eating whatever they find: seeds, insects, household scraps, and surplus grain.

In many high-income countries, poultry production has become a major agricultural industry. Birds are given the same sort of vaccines and hormones used for cattle. Chickens are bred for either eggs or meat. One poultry house may contain more than a million birds. Often, machines automatically provide feed and water, collect the eggs, and remove waste.

Sustainability and Food Justice

In the decades following the beginning of the Green Revolution, agricultural food production has increased dramatically. Unfortunately, there are drawbacks to the farming methods and technologies that allow for this increase.

One problematic feature of industrial agriculture is land use: half of the habitable land on Earth is currently used for farming. Land that used to be home to biodiverse ecosystems has been cleared for agricultural use, and many commercial farms use monoculture farming. Though monoculture farms produce more staple crops like wheat and corn, they are more susceptible to disease, lack biodiversity, and deplete nutrients in the soil.

Another issue with industrial farming is the overuse of fertilizers, particularly fertilizers that use nutrients like nitrogen and phosphorus. Over the past 35 years, the use of nitrogen and phosphorus fertilizers has increased dramatically. Crops only use about one-third of the nitrogen and less than half of the phosphorus applied to them; the rest of that nitrogen and phosphorus becomes runoff that pollutes the surrounding ecosystem. This nutrient pollution creates “dead zones” in aquatic ecosystems through a process called eutrophication: algae feed on the nitrogen and phosphorus, causing algal blooms. When the excess algae die, the bacteria that decompose the dead algae use up the water’s oxygen supply, suffocating fish and other aquatic organisms.

Though irrigation allows farmers to grow crops on land that otherwise would not be usable for agriculture, it also poses a threat to the environment. Irrigation requires significant land and water use; around 70 percent of freshwater withdrawal around the world is attributed to agricultural irrigation, and only about half of this water can be reused. Building dams and reservoirs for irrigation has destroyed many ecosystems in and around lakes and rivers. Irrigation can also introduce excess salt to soil and groundwater, negatively impacting both drinking water and plants in the surrounding area.

Currently, food production is the second-largest contributor to greenhouse gas emissions. Land, water, and air alike are all threatened by industrial agriculture, yet an estimated two billion people around the world still suffer from malnutrition. The issue is not that the agriculture industry does not produce enough food, but rather that the food supply is unevenly distributed. Many people cannot afford to eat enough, and those that can afford sufficient nutrition frequently waste food; one trillion dollars' worth of food is wasted around the world every year. Experts say that if corporations and consumers in the richest countries stopped wasting food, we could save enough to feed an extra two billion people—the same portion of the population that is currently malnourished.

The fight against hunger and the fight for sustainable food systems are deeply connected. In order to meet a growing global population's nutritional needs, the agricultural sector needs to shift its focus to environmentally sustainable food production. This may require a switch from industrial agriculture to permaculture, an ecological design system that mimics naturally existing, biodiverse environments while optimizing food production. In the meantime, corporations and governments need to collaborate to minimize food waste and provide affordable nutrition to those that buy the majority of their food, while providing economic assistance to small subsistence farmers in rural areas of low- to middle-income countries. By protecting the land, water, and air, and by sharing knowledge and resources, people may yet find solutions for the problems of world hunger and industrial agriculture.

IMPORTANT OF LIFE SKILLS

In this rapidly changing environment, there is a need of life skills to cope up with the changing pace of everyday life. They promote healthy behaviour of pupil teachers and make them empower to act positively and effectively when confronted with difficult situation either in classroom or in day to day life.

APPLICATION OF LIFE SKILLS

Application of life skills is referred to the use of life skills by students and teachers. In this module, there are thirty sessions containing a firsthand experience of life skills provided by the facilitator to make participants able to understand the concept of life skills and how to apply them to deal effectively with their students and in everyday life.

Objective of the course-

To develop the concept of life skills education and its management

INTRODUCTION

Life skills education is the process of facilitating learning or the acquisition of knowledge of skills values, beliefs and habits and this operationally is defined as life skills education. "Life skills" are defined as psychosocial abilities for adaptive and positive behavior that enable individuals to deal effectively with the demands and challenges of everyday life.

They are loosely grouped into three broad categories of skills: cognitive skills for analyzing and using information, personal skills for developing personal agency and managing oneself, and inter-personal skills for communicating and interacting effectively with others (UNICEF, 2013)

Life skills are numerous and it is difficult to limit their type and number. Here are thirteen of the most important life skills. They are categorized into three main areas:

- (a) Skills of knowing and living with oneself
- (b) Skills of knowing and living with others
- (c) Skills of making effective and good decisions.

MAJOR POINTS OF SYLLABUS

Skills of knowing and living with oneself

1. Self-awareness
2. Self-esteem
3. Coping with emotions
