Under the coordination of Mrs. Minakshi Kakran, the event ran successfully for six days, engaging students through demonstrations, practical exercises, and interactive sessions. The workshop allowed students to experiment with a range of materials, tools, and techniques to create original printed fabric designs.

The experience enhanced students' understanding of fabric surface design, improved their practical skills, and deepened their appreciation for handcrafted textile traditions. The workshop also emphasized the relevance of hand-printing in contemporary fashion and sustainable design practices.

On the final day of the workshop, an exhibition showcasing the students' work was organized.
